Fisher Calls on Settlement Says Shingle Must Come Ou Worker To Talk of Social Conditions Here

A. Rath upon the stand hear the end of the morning session, the secretary began to delve into social conditions here with the frankness that has distinguished his inquiry from the start.

Rath was equally frank in his answers, and some of these answers were rather startling in their combecome political boss by using and

Then Mr. Fisher asked him why this would be the case, and if the Anglo-Saxons would not mingle socially with people of another race.

"They're perfectly willing to give money to Christianize him," commented Rath, speaking to the relations of Anglo-Saxons here to an individual of another race, "but they don't want him in their midst." He stated further that in regard to this feeling, he sees little difference between the Angol-Saxon born here and the Anglo-Sexon who comes here. The "Human Side."

Rath was called by Mr. Fisher with this suggestion: "We've heard a good deal of the commercial side in this investigation. Now let's hear something of the human side," and Rath gave it. He gave as his opinion that the Filipino plantion laborer tends to drift toward the cities and that they seem physically unable to do the work. He doubted if homesteading under present candition is practical. One of the features of his statement was responsibility for conditions here. "I don't see how governor Frear is any more responsible for conditions here than I am," declared Rath. He doubted if social isolation here cuts much figure in the lack of independent small land-holders, stating that aside from the Anglo-Saxon race, the other races mingle freely. "I wrote the postal card through which it is charged an attempt to alse the race issue is made," said Lorrin Andrews, Kuhio's chief engineer, this morning. "I suppose the public is generally interested in learnng what the word was that was grased. The word was 'oligarchy.' When I used the word in the first iraft I intended it to mean the present incompetent officers of the Republican Territorial and County Central Committees. After the card was orinted, I thought that possibly the use of the word might be taken to mean the sugar planters or some other large interest here, so I had it erased. We have no quarrel with the planters and we are not raising the race issue. We simply want to put the affairs of the Republican party in who will attend to business."
